CIC welcomes all presidents, spouses and partners, representatives of sponsoring organizations, and friends of independent higher education to the 2022 Presidents Institute.

I could not be more excited to convene my first Presidents Institute as CIC president. One reason, of course, is that it will be a celebration of community after a year in which we very much missed being together. Another is the essential and timely nature of the program.

In responses to the global pandemic and economic collapse in early 2020, campus leaders swiftly implemented changes and innovations to safeguard their institutions against immediate threats. Which of these new approaches are essential building blocks for a strong and sustainable future? And which were necessary at a moment in time, but can now be set aside?

As our country faces a profound racial reckoning, what do presidents need in order to lead their institutions toward greater diversity, equity, and inclusion? And how can independent higher education become a more influential voice for greater social justice across America? Will fears about the durability of American democracy undermine our efforts to reckon with inequality and prepare students for engaged citizenship?

In this program you will find sessions on topics such as shared governance, the financial outlook for private colleges, strategies for diversity and inclusion, higher education and democracy, and new models for institutional sustainability. You also will find opportunities to gather informally with colleagues to share ideas, experiences, and inspiration.

The last two years have taught us a great deal about what matters in higher education. Wise, courageous, and effective presidential leadership has never been more important.

The Presidents Institute has long been a place I come to learn from colleagues and to refresh my sense of purpose in this difficult but important work. I am so excited that after too long an interruption, we are together again—with appropriate safety protocols in place—as an educational community dedicated to “Recovery, Reckoning, Reinvention.”

I am delighted to be with you.

Marjorie Hass
President, CIC
Health and Safety

CIC is committed to the health and safety of its members and their communities. The following measures are in place to bring colleagues together with thoughtful care for health and well-being.

VACCINE—All participants are expected to be fully vaccinated and to verify their vaccination status on CrowdPass before arrival.

MASKS—Participants should wear masks throughout the Institute meeting space, except when speaking from a stage or when eating or drinking. Presenters may choose to remove their masks while speaking, so long as appropriate distancing is maintained.

SOCIAL DISTANCE—Participants will be expected to practice social distancing in Institute spaces. Session rooms will be set up to create ample physical distance between participants. Additional time has been allotted between sessions to minimize congestion in shared spaces.

FOOD AND BEVERAGE—All break and meal spaces will allow for social distancing. Masks and gloves are required of all food and beverage staff. All participants should wear masks when not actively eating or drinking.

HAND HYGIENE—Hand sanitizer stations will be available in high-traffic areas, such as meeting room corridors and near food and beverage stations.

CLEANING AND SANITIZATION—Additional time between sessions will allow for enhanced cleaning protocols, with particular attention given to high-touch areas during Institute hours and deep cleaning and disinfecting at the end of each day.

ILLNESS—Participants experiencing any signs of illness, including cold or flu-like symptoms, should self-isolate in their hotel sleeping room. Participants experiencing any symptoms typical of COVID-19 infection should be tested. CIC has arranged for a health care provider to be on-site during specific hours; see Guidebook for information about this service as well as local medical providers and testing resources. Report any suspected or confirmed cases of COVID-19 to CIC at (202) 773-0770. And in a true medical emergency, call 911.

Updated Health and Safety Information will be available on-site and in Guidebook.
Stay Connected

Guidebook, CIC’s free Institute mobile app, is available now for download. The main feature of Guidebook is mobile access to the entire Institute schedule. Other features include:

- A private social feed to share thoughts, photos, and more with fellow participants;
- The ability to send messages and schedule meetings with other participants and Institute sponsors;
- Easy access to session materials; and
- A personalized “My Schedule” that will already include any sessions you pre-registered to attend and allow you to mark sessions of interest.

Guidebook is compatible with most devices, including mobile phones and tablets. To obtain the Presidents Institute guide, follow these simple steps:

1. Download Guidebook from the Apple App Store or Google Play Store.
2. Check your email for the personalized invitation to CIC’s Presidents Institute Guidebook. If you cannot find the email, please ask for assistance at the registration desk.
3. Follow the instructions in the email to access the private Institute guide.

The Half-Life of Freedom: Race and Justice in America Today

Faced with ongoing calls for racial justice; protests against police brutality; persistent inequality in employment, housing, and education; and institutional reckoning with racism and the legacies of slavery, presidents of independent colleges and universities must lead with moral courage, sensitivity, and understanding. Despite our “independence,” private colleges are not immune from the pressures and threats of the culture wars. We too confront questions about teaching critical race theory; efforts to rename colleges, buildings, and programs; and invitations to controversial campus speakers. The Institute’s keynote address will provide reflections on and analyses of the complex dynamics of race and racism in America and their impact on higher education. Distinguished professor and award-winning journalist Jelani Cobb has been described as combining the “rigor and depth of a professional historian with the alertness of a reporter, the liberal passion of an engaged public intellectual, and the literary flair of a fine writer.” He will inspire presidents to work, tirelessly, toward achieving an ongoing dream of equity and genuine democracy. Cobb will explain how the levers of justice are in our hands and can be used to motivate campus and civil authorities to take greater strides toward racial justice and equality. And he will remind us that the only obstacle holding us back is the comforting illusion that we’ve already achieved our goals.

Jelani Cobb is a staff writer at the New Yorker, to which he has been contributing since 2012. In 2015, he won the Sidney Hillman Prize for Opinion and Analysis Journalism for his columns on race, the police, and injustice. In addition, he is the Ira A. Lipman Professor of Journalism at Columbia University, joining the faculty in 2016. Previously, Cobb was associate professor of history and director of the Africana Studies Institute at the University of Connecticut, where he specialized in post-Civil War African American history, 20th-century American politics, and the history of the Cold War. Earlier, he taught at Rutgers University and at Spelman College. He is a recipient of fellowships from the Fulbright and Ford Foundations. Cobb is co-editor of the just-published anthology The Matter of Black Lives: Writing from The New Yorker (2021) and author of Substance of Hope: Barack Obama and the Paradox of Progress (2010), To the Break of Dawn: A Freestyle on the Hip Hop Aesthetic (2007), and The Devil & Dave Chappelle and Other Essays (2007). He recently edited and wrote a new introduction for the Kerner Commission—a historical study of American racism and police violence—contextualizing it for a new generation. Cobb is the recipient of the Walter Bernstein Award from the Writer’s Guild of America for his investigative series Policing the Police, which aired on PBS Frontline. Another recent Frontline documentary, Whose Vote Counts, explores allegations of voter disenfranchisement and fraud in the 2020 election. Cobb earned his undergraduate degree from Howard University and a PhD in American history from Rutgers University.

    Bridging Differences on Campus
    The “Courageous Conversations” program helps students become more effective and empathetic dialogue partners across lines of difference. Participants will consider such questions as: What are the most significant challenges faced by students and institutions when it comes to difficult dialogues? What curricular and co-curricular programming has been most effective in facilitating such dialogues? How can we engage students who might initially be disinclined to engage with those from whom they differ? And what effect does bridge-building work of this sort have on the campus at large?

    Holistic Campus Planning: Facilities, Programs, and the Community
    This roundtable will share models of strategic master planning that integrate facility upgrades, curricular and co-curricular programming, and community connections. Facilitators will discuss the positive impact this process has had on enrollment and on financing opportunities. Participants are encouraged to share strategies for integrated campus master planning as well.

Osprey 6 Labor and New Student Shortages in Higher Education
As colleges plan for next year, they are discovering that severe shortages in the number of prospective students and candidates for open positions are replacing COVID-19 problems. We will discuss how independent colleges and universities are dealing with these new challenges.

Michael L. Frandsen, President, Wittenberg University

Micahel Townsley, Senior Consultant, Stevens Strategy, LLC

Osprey 5 Leveraging Debt as a Strategic Tool
Many institutions have continued to increase their long-term debt but have not developed effective ways to assess the value that capital investments can provide. As a result, decisions about debt are often based on traditional measures that can limit the degree to which debt can act as a strategic tool. We will consider key metrics that presidents should monitor to determine whether current or future debt is serving as a strategic investment, rather than a crippling burden.

Haven Ladd, Partner, EY-Parthenon

Osprey 7 Presidents “Open Mic”
(Open only to currently serving college and university presidents)
This forum is an opportunity for presidents to raise important topics and questions, including confidential and sensitive issues. The discussion is expected to be candid and broad ranging, covering topics such as specific administrative matters, institutional structures and staffing, dealings with the board, and the relationship between presidents’ professional and personal lives. Guidance will be offered from other participating presidents.

Roderick L. Smothers, President, Philander Smith College

Osprey 8 Second Season Presidencies: Serving as a New President at the Same Institution
Some of us have outlasted the 6.5-year average for college presidents and are transitioning into new relationships with our campuses. Others will have their service divided into BP and AP (before and after pandemic). How do we live into second seasons as “new” presidents of our current institutions?

David F. McFadden, President, Manchester University

Rebecca J. Stoltzfus, President, Goshen College

Osprey 9 Strategic Partnerships
Many private institutions have significant overlap in their missions. Enrollment challenges today along with projected decreases in available students make it a fruitful time to explore mutually beneficial collaborations. Participants will discuss different approaches to strategic partnerships.

Dottie L. King, President, Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College
Using an Innovation Fund to Create an Innovative Culture
This roundtable will explore successful and innovative approaches to funding creative ideas that help inspire a growth-minded campus culture. How can such a fund support new initiatives, for example to drive enrollment, without having to worry about the risk to the budget in the program’s infancy? Ideas and experiences among participants will be shared.

Polly Peterson, President, University of Jamestown

Vocation and Calling as Differentiators for Retention and Recruitment
Given the critical importance of retention and recruitment, colleges and universities find themselves needing to employ every available tool. The recent focus on the concepts of vocation and calling in higher education affords independent institutions an opportunity to provide greater individualized attention to questions of meaning and purpose among undergraduates. This session provides information on CIC’s Network for Vocation in Undergraduate Education (NetVUE), which offers programmatic and financial support to institutions that are making use of these concepts in their recruitment and retention efforts.

Tracy Y. Espy, President, Mitchell College

Voice of the Online Learner: Listening to Student Voices in Extraordinary Times
Based on data gathered from more than 3,000 past, present, and prospective online college students across the nation, we will explore actionable takeaways and recommendations that presidents can immediately apply to their institutions as they look to the future of their online learner experience and programs. Is virtual learning key to a healthy future for independent colleges and universities, or should institutions now double down on the value of in-person, campus-based education? Or are these in fact not either-or questions, but both-and propositions?

Connected Futures: Higher Education and Democracy

The futures of democracy and independent higher education are interwoven. Can democracy thrive without a robust and independent system of higher education to guard knowledge and fact, cultivate pluralistic communities, generate opportunity, and prepare students for engaged citizenship? An academic leader for more than 30 years and an expert in how institutions influence society, Ron Daniels, author of What Universities Owe Democracy (2021), will deliver a charge to the presidents of independent colleges and universities in this era when cultural and political fault lines threaten the future of democracy and its institutions. Daniels will examine four key responsibilities of independent higher education: to promote social mobility, to teach civic education, to generate knowledge and expertise, and to foster pluralism. He also will explore areas of urgent reform to ensure healthy futures for both democracy and independent higher education.

Ronald J. Daniels has served as the 14th president of Johns Hopkins University since 2009. Before coming to Johns Hopkins, he was provost and professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania and dean and James M. Tory Professor of Law at the University of Toronto. A law and economics scholar, he is the author of the recently published What Universities Owe Democracy, and co-author of books and scholarly articles on the intersections of law, economics, development, and public policy in areas such as corporate and securities law, social and economic regulation, and the role of law and legal institutions in promoting third-world development. Daniels is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts & Sciences and the American Philosophical Society. He received a Carnegie Corporation of New York Academic Leadership Award in 2015 and was named a member of the Order of Canada in 2016. Daniels earned a BA and a JD from the University of Toronto and an LLM from Yale University.

RECOGNITION OF RICHARD EKMAN

CIC gratefully acknowledges a special gift from TIAA in honor of the Inaugural Richard Ekman Keynote Address in Higher Education.

Remarks by Katherine Bergeron, Chair, Board of Directors, CIC, and President, Connecticut College

In recognition of his remarkable term of more than 20 years as president of the Council of Independent Colleges, the CIC Board of Directors has honored the legacy of Richard Ekman by establishing the Richard Ekman Keynote Address in Higher Education, to be presented each year at the CIC Presidents Institute. As president of CIC, Ekman led significant growth in membership, increased the financial strength of the organization through fundraising and careful stewardship, and supported the development of programs that benefited hundreds of institutions and their leaders. Speakers selected to deliver the annual Ekman Address will represent the highest standard of excellence and leadership—whether as scholars or as practitioners—and the Ekman Addresses will provide insight on topics important to all presidents of independent colleges and universities.

Richard Ekman served as president of the Council of Independent Colleges from 2000 to 2021. Previously, Ekman served as vice president for programs of Atlantic Philanthropies and as secretary and senior program officer of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Earlier, he was at the National Endowment for the Humanities, successively as director of the Division of Education Programs and the Division of Research Programs; at Hiram College as vice president and dean, where he was a tenured member of the history faculty; and at the University of Massachusetts at Boston as assistant to the provost. He currently serves as a member of many boards, including those that provide guidance to the Harvard University’s Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, American Academic Leadership Institute, Emeriti Retirement Health, Yale-New Haven Teachers Institute, and Project Pericles. His essays have appeared in the Chronicle of Higher Education, University Business, Inside Higher Ed, Carnegie Reporter, and Washington Post. Ekman earned his AB in history and PhD in the history of American civilization from Harvard University.

Campus Strategies for Responding to Climate Change
While debates rage over federal, state, and local efforts in support of climate change initiatives, many colleges and universities are forging ahead with their own environmental commitments. The Presidents’ Climate Leadership Commitments provide frameworks to advance campus climate action. Although each institution determines its own goals and actions, presenters will describe key steps needed to fulfill the intention of the commitments. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss with colleagues ways to address climate change both locally and globally through direct campus action, in the curriculum, and in various stages of adoption.

Shared Governance: Rebuilding Trust and Important Relationships
The past year-and-a-half has out of necessity required many colleges and universities to use existing decision-making processes efficiently in order to be more nimble and flexible. Changes have included working with the faculty to adjust academic policies and curricular offerings. These circumstances have in some instances placed strains on long-standing approaches to shared governance. How did presidents leverage important relationships between the faculty and the board to build trust among the faculty and achieve success? Now with the ability to apply lessons learned from the pandemic, what steps can presidents take to continue to engage the faculty—as well as the staff—in finding constructive solutions to pressing problems, without getting bogged down in battles over process? What insights were gained about how shared governance can be used when agility and responsiveness are imperative for success? Presidents who have wrestled successfully with these issues will offer guidance and invite conversation about alternate approaches.

Strategies for Diversity and Inclusion at Predominantly White Institutions

Issues of diversity, equity, and inclusion have taken on greater urgency on college campuses, especially at predominantly white institutions. Presidents have a critical part to play in helping to educate and empower their students about matters of diversity as well as to help their institutions develop more equitable and inclusive policies and practices. What are effective strategies on campuses where diversity is limited among the student body or among the faculty and staff? What approaches can support students of color and other underrepresented students when they are in the minority? What is the president’s role in promoting a healthy, vibrant learning environment for all students? Presidential colleagues will offer insights from their experience with these issues.

Student Mental Health and Well-being: Considerations for Presidents

Rising mental health problems among college students—exacerbated by the pandemic—have colleges scrambling to provide additional resources and support for struggling students. What do presidents need to know about the most current research and strategies to support students’ mental health and well-being? What multi-level approaches can address the most urgent needs of students experiencing mental illness, as well as prevention and early intervention efforts that promote mental wellness? How can these efforts help presidents cultivate strength and resilience within the entire campus community?

The Financial and Strategic Outlook for Private Colleges

How do financial analysts view the future of independent colleges and universities? Pressures persist to reduce costs, develop alternative sources of revenue, eliminate under-enrolled programs, collaborate, and consider new business models. How can a college president navigate the institution through this period of change? An industry expert will review the financial outlook for private colleges and universities for 2022 and outline issues expected to be prominent for higher education management in the near future.

Maximizing the President and Spouse Role in Fundraising

This session will explore the unique way the president and spouse or partner can work strategically with the vice president for development or advancement to enhance fundraising efforts on campus. Drawing on decades of experience from multiple institutions, the presenters will share different approaches to consider when planning effective strategies for the participation of the president and spouse or partner in fundraising, from donor cultivation to the ask. What major steps should you consider as you prepare to meet with your next major donor?

Victoria Dowling is vice president for institutional advancement at Carroll University in Wisconsin, where she has served since 2020. Previously, Dowling was senior vice president at McKendree University and vice president for development, alumni, and parent relations at Gettysburg College. She also has served in various other advancement roles at Pomona College, Occidental College, and California Lutheran University. During her 37-year career she has planned, managed, or participated in six major fundraising campaigns and worked with seven presidents and their spouses or partners.

Cindy Gnadinger became the first female president of Carroll University in Wisconsin in 2017. She previously served as president of St. Catharine College, where she also was provost. Earlier, she was vice president for academic affairs at William Peace University. Gnadinger started her academic career at Bellarmine University as professor of education and went on to serve as dean of the school of education and assistant vice president for academic affairs. She serves as a member of the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities board of directors.

John D. Gnadinger is presidential spouse at Carroll University in Wisconsin, where he has been since 2017; he also serves in the school of business as director for the Analytics and Business Intelligence Consortium and as an instructor. Previously, he was presidential spouse at St. Catharine College. Gnadinger held several positions at Johnson Controls, Inc., including director of engineered solutions and director of global enterprise application solutions. He is the chair of the CIC Presidents Institute Spouses and Partners Task Force.

Compelling Evidence Liberal Arts Leaders Need
Demonstrating the value of liberal arts-based education is a continuing challenge in this skeptical era. New objective research not only documents its long-term impact on life success and meaning but provides presidents with fresh perspectives on how to more convincingly communicate its effectiveness and establish institutional plans and priorities to enhance its value. The study findings are based on interviews of 1,000 adult graduates of many types of institutions and offers compelling comparative evidence that a liberal arts education has a distinctly large and lasting impact on lifetime success, leadership, altruism, learning, and fulfillment.

Essential Metrics for Program Efficiency and Effectiveness—and How to Use Them
Presidents need a clear understanding of which programs are cost effective and successful in order to make strategic decisions about academic offerings and deployment of personnel and resources. What metrics do presidents need to monitor? How can they use margin analysis and benchmarking tools to monitor program performance and inform planning and decision-making? How can presidents promote a culture of evidence-based decisions across the campus?

Mitigating Cybersecurity Risk: Prevention and Recovery

Cybersecurity attacks and ransomware incidents are on the rise in higher education, with the FBI recently warning colleges and universities to take steps to protect one of their most important assets: data. Learn about concrete steps institutions can take to protect their data, including training and awareness, critical business processes, and recovery plans. Consider the president’s role in planning and execution, especially in response to ransomware attacks and security breaches.

Pursuing Purpose: Defining Your Career as Presidential Spouse

Have you ever been asked, “What do you do as the ‘spouse’ of the president?” Have you ever asked yourself, “What did I accomplish today that was meaningful to me?” Have you ever thought, “How can I contribute to our institution with the limited time I have available?” These are all questions that have been discussed by many spouses and partners of university presidents. The “career” of presidential spouse or partner rarely comes with a job description or clear training. In this conversation we will explore ways to define individual passions, find connection between the mission of the institution and the things that motivate you, and discover how each partner or spouse can uniquely craft a role that is both meaningful and purposeful.

The View from TIAA: A Conversation about Leadership

TIAA has been the leader in serving the financial needs of people in academic, cultural, and other nonprofit fields for over a century and has shown a steadfast commitment to the welfare of people and institutions in independent higher education. From the point of view of a leading corporate friend of higher education, newly-appointed TIAA CEO Thasunda Brown Duckett will, in this moderated conversation, offer fresh insights on the opportunities and challenges of this moment for higher education and their implications for the near future. Which trends are likely to have the greatest effect on higher education and the broader economy? What conditions might presidents and boards plan to guard their institutions against and what opportunities might they be poised to seize? How might presidents lead through the recovery and reckoning of this moment so they can reinvent their futures?

Thasunda Brown Duckett is president and chief executive officer of TIAA, a Fortune 100 provider of secure retirements and outcome-focused investment solutions to millions of people working in higher education, health care, and other mission-driven organizations. She is one of two Black women currently leading a Fortune 500 firm, and just the fourth Black woman to serve as a Fortune 500 CEO. As TIAA’s CEO, Duckett leads a company whose mission is defined by financial inclusion and opportunity—goals and values she has upheld throughout her career. Duckett joined TIAA after serving as chief executive officer of Chase Consumer Banking, where she oversaw a banking network with more than $600 billion in deposits and 50,000 employees. Previously, she was the CEO of Chase Auto Finance, one of the leading U.S. providers of auto financing, and national retail sales executive for Chase Mortgage Banking, where she managed 4,000 mortgage bankers. Earlier in her career, Duckett was director of emerging markets at Fannie Mae, where she led the implementation of national strategies designed to increase homeownership among Black and Hispanic Americans. She serves on the boards of NIKE, Inc., Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights, Sesame Workshop, National Medal of Honor Museum, and Economic Club of New York, as well as the University of Houston Board of Visitors and the Dean’s Advisory Board for Baylor University’s Hankamer School of Business. In addition, she is a member of the Executive Leadership Council, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc., and Jack and Jill of America Inc. Duckett founded the Rosie and Otis Brown Foundation, in honor of her parents, to recognize and reward people who use ordinary means to empower and uplift their community in extraordinary ways. She holds a bachelor’s degree in finance and marketing from the University of Houston and an MBA from Baylor University.
Moderator: Linda A. Livingstone is the 15th president of Baylor University in Texas. She previously served as dean and professor of management at the George Washington University School of Business, as dean and professor of management at Pepperdine University’s Graziadio School of Business and Management, and as a tenured faculty member and associate dean of graduate programs at Baylor’s Hankamer School of Business. Livingstone is a scholar in organizational behavior, leadership, creativity, and university accreditation and extensively published in these fields. She serves on the boards of Baylor College of Medicine, Capital Southwest Industrials, Waco Industrial Foundation, the Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas, Inc., the Taskforce on Higher Education and Opportunity, and the AGB Council of Presidents. In addition, she serves as the vice chair of the Big XII Conference board of directors, as the secretary for the board of directors of the American Council on Education, on the NCAA Division I board of directors, and on the NCAA board of governors. Livingstone was inducted into Oklahoma State University’s (OSU) Hall of Fame in 2019 for her performance in women’s basketball. She also is a member of the OSU Spears School of Business Hall of Fame, was the first recipient of the Outstanding PhD Alumnus Award, and is a recipient of the OSU Distinguished Alumni Award. Livingstone earned a BS in economics and management, an MBA, and a PhD in management and organizational behavior, all at OSU.

Alternatives to Merger: New Models for Sustainability and Growth
Increasingly, independent colleges and universities are exploring new models of collaboration that build on complementary strengths of partner organizations while preserving institutional charters and identities to create opportunities for long-term sustainability and growth. These so-called “mutual growth federations” can include partnerships, consortial arrangements, affiliation agreements, or alliances. Such collaborations can provide a wide range of shared services that result in economies of scale; new academic courses and joint degree programs designed to increase overall enrollments; and new organizational structures designed to increase efficiency and improve the quality of services. Those who have ventured into such arrangements will describe the models adopted, the pros and cons of various approaches, and lessons learned (and still being learned) in the process.

Calusa Ballroom 4 and 5  Bold Fundraising Goals and Strategies to Achieve Them

Independent colleges and universities seem to be in campaign mode constantly these days. Yet a few institutions have made headlines with especially ambitious—even bold—fundraising goals. In a time of constrained resources when there is increased competition for philanthropic support, why does it make sense to set sights so high? What are the pros—and the cons—of bold goals? What pieces need to be in place to make these ambitious undertakings realistic? What is required for the president to lead a high-achieving campaign?

Calusa Ballroom 8 and 9  Sharing Online Courses to Increase Equity, Retention, and Revenue

Practices that focus on student needs and flexible course options can greatly improve equity, retention, and revenue. In this session, two presidents will describe how using institutionally vetted online courses shared through the CIC Online Course Sharing Consortium can be an essential component of a comprehensive student support program to strengthen readiness and retention at all stages of a student’s undergraduate career. In addition, course sharing can expand the ability to meet students’ entire demand for summer courses. Learn how institutions have improved completion for students, especially for underserved students, doubled or even quadrupled summer revenue, and, at the same time, enhanced institutional oversight of academic quality.

Community Engagement in Highly Partisan Times
With the nation deeply divided over a range of social and political issues, how can independent colleges engage their communities in the exploration of these fractious topics and serve as venues for understanding and healing? Engaging Alumni in Institutional DEI Work
As colleges and universities develop comprehensive plans to advance diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI), and antiracist goals, alumni of predominantly white institutions are not always actively involved in these efforts. Some may disengage from the institution due to memories of past injustices. Others may hold negative perceptions of institutional initiatives that support a more diverse student body. We will discuss efforts to deepen understanding of campus DEI goals and strategies for meaningful alumni engagement in the planning and implementation of initiatives.

To be effective, campus initiatives need to address both individual mindsets, biases, and actions as well as systemic and structural policies and practices that threaten the equity of educational opportunity and fairness of our institutions. In addition, to be effective as leaders, presidents need to personally engage in the hard work of inclusive justice by committing to making unbiased choices and being antiracist in all aspects of their lives. Presidents leading the workshop will offer insights from their own experiences as leaders who have wrestled with these challenging issues, describing lessons learned in the process, and inviting workshop participants to take steps forward in their own antiracist presidential leadership. |

Design for Equity in Higher Education: An Adapted Design Thinking Model for Presidents
Sponsored by AGB Search, LLC

Independent colleges face numerous challenges—changing student demographics, gaps in student success, technology integration, financial constraints, and reckoning with inequity and injustice—that call on presidents to lead change in organizational policies and practices for the enterprise to be successful. This workshop will introduce the Design for Equity in Higher Education (DEHE) model, which adapts design thinking for use in higher education to facilitate equity-minded change. This adaptation addresses issues of identity, power, and values and incorporates an understanding of the organizational context and competing interests of key stakeholders. The DEHE framework will be discussed in detail, and institutional case studies will provide examples of the successes and challenges faced by campus design teams, including from the perspective of a college president who has engaged design thinking for the past several years. Participants will then collaborate on a design for equity activity, getting hands-on practice using DEHE to design innovative and equity-building solutions.

No Margin, No Mission: Presidential Strategies for Performance and Financial Health
Sponsored by Westfall Gold

A study conducted by the New American Colleges and Universities (NACU) with support from the TIAA Institute identified a common set of strategies leading to financial sustainability of independent colleges and universities. The path to strong financial health was found to be connected to a relentless command-and-control approach to fiscal and budget management that ensures institutions trim unnecessary expenses while investing in revenue-producing programs that align with mission and market demand. Workshop participants will be introduced to the benchmark dashboards and metrics, ROI formula developed, and higher-level leadership qualities and strategies found in the research. In addition, small group discussions will address specific findings in the study, including performance-based and data-informed metrics to create efficiencies; culture of performance on campus (which doesn’t happen overnight); unpopular decisions by the president; and market-driven program expansion. This will be a highly interactive session and will include room for ample Q&A with participants.

Guiding Board Decision-Making in an Era of Constant Change
The pandemic highlighted how many institutions’ traditional, consultative decision-making practices did not serve presidents’ need to make important decisions quickly. This has been particularly true in working with boards of trustees, which characteristically had met only three or four times a year, in-person, on a fixed schedule. What approaches—honed over the last two years—have proven effective in consulting with boards, especially when decisions need to be made remotely at a more rapid pace? Which changes in working with boards are likely to be temporary and which will continue? What will be the impact on the future of president-board relations?

New Standards for Fundraising Reporting: Why Presidents Need to Know
In an era when educational institutions are increasingly under the microscope, it is vitally important to have unambiguous standards and guidelines for fundraising reporting. The Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) recently published revised Global Reporting Standards that take effect on July 1, 2022. Presidents need to be aware of these standards to inform strategic decisions and ensure their institutions are upholding transparent and ethical standards in this critical work. Presenters familiar with these new guidelines will provide clear guidance on what philanthropic campaigns should and should not count, ensuring equivalence when setting fundraising goals and comparing achievements with those of other institutions.

Preparing for the Coming Demographic Shift
The coming decade promises profound demographic change, including significant nationwide reductions in the overall number of college-bound students and a marked shift toward first-generation, low-income, and other traditionally underrepresented populations. This session will offer a detailed examination of these phenomena and their implications for independent colleges and universities. Several presidents will describe their strategies to position their institutions for ongoing success in light of the coming demographic shift.

You and Your Partner: Thriving through the Pandemic and Beyond

The job of running a college changed in many ways during the pandemic. How have those shifts provided an opportunity for presidents and their spouses or partners to re-evaluate work/life integration, adjust routines, and find new ways to stay in touch with close friends and family members? What promising discoveries emerged that presidential couples want to preserve? How does a healthy relationship for the presidential couple benefit the campus?

Nurturing New and Old Rituals on Campus

A wise presidential spouse once said that if you hold an event twice on campus it becomes a tradition. Rituals often are a way for the campus to celebrate past history and look forward to future accomplishments. But sometimes the rituals impede campus progress. How can presidential spouses and partners respect but support modernization of campus traditions and encourage the development of new rituals?

The Future of the Independent College Presidency

Independent colleges and universities are experiencing the impact of many rapidly evolving pressures, including those created by continued effects of the pandemic, ongoing pressures on enrollments and finances, a polarized public under siege amidst culture wars, and repeated incidents of racial injustice and increasing social inequality. These forces are affecting the presidency as well. But the presidency was undergoing change well before 2020—changes in governance, external threats, public perceptions about private colleges, crisis management, presidential communications, and the ways presidents spend their time, to name a few. Which of these changes are likely to be lasting? How might they affect the president’s approach to the work going forward? What is the impact on presidents’ energy and capacity to undertake this leadership role for an extended period? What new or underutilized skills are needed, and what might these competencies suggest for the future preparation of presidents? A panel of CIC presidents will engage in a discussion of these and other questions as they reflect on the future of the independent college presidency.

Debbie Cottrell became the 16th president of Texas Lutheran University in 2019. Prior to assuming the presidency, she served as vice president for academic affairs for seven years. Previously, Cottrell served as provost of William Peace University, where she led academic affairs, enrollment, and student life. She also was associate dean of the faculty and director of graduate programs at Smith College. Cottrell began her career in higher education at Cottey College, where she taught history and government and served as assistant dean of the faculty. Prior to attending graduate school, Cottrell taught middle school and worked as an editor at the Texas Historical Commission. She is the author of a biography of Annie Webb Blanton, an educator who became the first woman in Texas elected to statewide office, which received the Liz Carpenter Award from the Texas State Historical Association. She serves on the executive advisory committee for the Handbook of Texas Women. Cottrell was the recipient of CIC’s Chief Academic Officer Award in 2017 and is a facilitator in CIC’s Presidential Vocation and Institutional Mission program. A first-generation college student, she holds a bachelor’s degree from Baylor University and a master’s and PhD in history from the University of Texas at Austin.

Isiaah Crawford became president of the University of Puget Sound in Washington in 2016. As president, he has promoted curricular innovation, which has led to the development of an array of new degree programs, including a master of public health; increased access for all students to high-impact experiential learning; expanded community engagement to include offering a bachelor of arts degree to the residents of the Washington Corrections Center for Women; and created a vice president for institutional equity and diversity position to support the university’s commitment to becoming a fully inclusive and welcoming community. From 2008 until his presidency at Puget Sound, Crawford served as provost and chief academic officer of Seattle University. Earlier, he was dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Loyola University Chicago (2003–2008), where he joined the faculty of the department of psychology in 1987. Crawford’s program of research has focused on health promotion, human sexuality, and training mental health professionals. Crawford serves on the boards of the Annapolis Group, Independent Colleges of Washington, and the Northwest Conference, and he is chair of the board of directors of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. Crawford earned his bachelor’s degree from St. Louis University and master’s and doctoral degrees in clinical psychology from DePaul University.

Charles W. “Chip” Pollard has been the president of John Brown University (JBU) in Arkansas since 2004. During his time at JBU, the university has been blessed to receive more than $290 million in gifts, to expand its endowment from $50 million to over $165 million, and to complete 17 major building projects. JBU also has initiated new academic programs in play therapy, nursing, computer science, and data analytics, and has seen its enrollment increase to over 1,900 students. JBU has been named seven years in a row by the Chronicle of Higher Education to its Honor Role in the “Great Colleges to Work For” survey (2015–2021). Pollard teaches regularly in the undergraduate program and speaks frequently in chapel and other venues. Before coming to JBU, he taught English literature at Calvin College for seven years and practiced law at Latham & Watkins for three years. He is the author of two books, May It Always Be True: Educating Students in Faith (2011) and New World Modernisms (2005). Pollard has been a member of the board of the Council for Christian Colleges & Universities since 2009, serving as chair from 2013–2018. He also serves on the board of Wheaton College (IL), his alma mater. He is a member of the CIC Board of Directors. Pollard holds a bachelor’s degree in English from Wheaton College, a law degree from Harvard Law School, a master’s degree in English from Oxford University, and a PhD in English from the University of Virginia.

Moderator: Marjorie Hass became president of the Council of Independent Colleges in July 2021, after years of strengthening independent higher education in various leadership roles. From 2017 until her appointment to the CIC presidency, Hass served as president of Rhodes College. During that time, she expanded the college’s engagement with the city of Memphis, enhanced inclusive excellence, and led a comprehensive and inclusive strategic planning process, positioning the college for success in the next decade. Previously, Hass served for eight years as president of Austin College where she defined a strong vision for the college’s future, pairing academic excellence with a commitment to educational access for talented students regardless of financial background, along with a strategic approach to securing the resources needed to achieve that vision. Earlier, she spent more than 16 years as a member of the philosophy faculty and subsequently as provost at Muhlenberg College.

Robert Hale and Karen Hale have donated approximately $20 million to Mr. Hale’s alma mater to support scholarships, the college’s nationally recognized career program, and improvements to athletics facilities. In 2021, the Hales pledged an additional $30 million, the largest single gift in Connecticut College’s history, to support financial aid, athletics, and immediate improvements to the campus infrastructure. Connecticut College is far from the only beneficiary of the Hale’s philanthropy: In May 2021, the Hales surprised each of Quincy College’s (MA) 270 graduates with a $1,000 cash gift. Over the years, the Hales and their foundation, the New Breeze Foundation, have made generous contributions to education and health organizations, including more than $100 million in contributions to Boston Children’s Hospital and Brigham and Women’s Hospital and more than $25 million to Deerfield Academy.

About the Philanthropy Award—Individual

The historical and literal definition of “philanthropy” is the “love of humankind.” This award celebrates an individual or individuals who demonstrate this love through consequential giving—either in volunteer service or financial support or both—to independent colleges and universities that share the mission of the Council of Independent Colleges. The award honors those who, by their example, provide a beacon for others to follow.

“Your passionate support of independent schools and colleges has set an inspiring standard of philanthropic service for all supporters of higher education.”
CIC AWARD FOR PHILANTHROPY (ORGANIZATION)

PRESENTED TO

Cannon Charitable Interests

"Grants from Cannon Charitable Interests have allowed Wingate University and more than 25 additional CIC member colleges and universities in North Carolina and other states to complete significant projects and implement new programs."

The Cannon Charitable Interests, composed of the Cannon Foundation, the Charles A. Cannon Charitable Trusts, and the Mariam and Robert Hayes Charitable Trust, supports numerous organizations across the state of North Carolina, continuing founder Charles A. Cannon’s legacy of community leadership and philanthropy. Giving from the Cannon Charitable Interests to Wingate University totals more than $35 million. More than 25 other CIC member institutions in North Carolina and other states have received support from Cannon Charitable Interests, including: Barton College, Belmont Abbey College, Bennett College, Brevard College, Catawba College, Chowan University, Converse University, Gardner-Webb University, Guilford College, Hampden-Sydney College, High Point University, Johnson C. Smith University, Lenoir-Rhyne University, Livingstone College, Mars Hill University, Meredith College, Montreat College, North Carolina Wesleyan College, Pfeiffer University, Queens University of Charlotte, Salem College, St. Andrews University, Shaw University, University of Mount Olive, Warren Wilson College, Wheaton College (IL), and William Peace University.

About the Philanthropy Award—Organization

Philanthropic foundations and corporate giving programs support innovative thinking and the development of ideas and programs. As important cultural agents, they focus the nation’s attention on pressing issues facing our society. This award celebrates a foundation or corporation whose support to CIC or private colleges and universities has demonstrated leadership and vision and consequently has made a significant difference in the vitality of independent higher education.

PRESENTED TO

Judith Block McLaughlin

Judith Block McLaughlin, as educational chair of the Harvard Seminar for New Presidents and the Harvard Seminar for Experienced Presidents, has developed over 1,000 college and university presidents since the program’s inception in 1990. Prior to joining Harvard, she was dean of student affairs at two colleges, executive director of the National Academy of Education, and a high school social studies teacher. McLaughlin has written and consulted extensively on leadership transitions, presidential assessment, and board-president relationships. She has published Leadership Amidst Controversy: Presidential Perspectives; Leadership Transitions: The New College President; and Choosing a College President: Opportunities and Constraints (with D. Riesman).

“You have contributed enormously to strengthening the leadership pipeline, contributing to the success of more than 1,000 college and university presidents.”

About the Allen P. Splete Award

The Allen P. Splete Award is presented to an individual, organization, or publication in recognition of significant contributions to independent higher education. Recipients have demonstrated national leadership, through ideas and commitment, on behalf of private colleges and universities. The award is named after Allen P. Splete, president of CIC from 1986 to 2000.

Media Guidelines

A key feature of the Presidents Institute is an atmosphere of candor that allows participants to speak freely with their colleagues. Although the Institute is a “closed” event, CIC invites select members of the media as speakers and reporters. Registered journalists are welcome to attend plenary and concurrent sessions except for those marked “By invitation only” or “Open only to currently serving college and university presidents,” which are closed to the media.

The invited journalists are encouraged to write about Institute sessions and issues, and are free to interview any willing speaker, presenter, or participant. Journalists are expected to clearly identify themselves as journalists and to obtain permission before identifying or attributing quotes to any speakers or participants, except for presenters in plenary sessions, whose prepared remarks may be quoted with attribution.

For the purposes of organizational communication, CIC may use images and quotes from Institute events.

SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY

Use of social media is encouraged as a way of sharing the energy and excitement of the Presidents Institute. Please use the hashtag #2022PI.

Confidentiality is essential to the dynamic of the Institute. For that reason, social media users are asked to follow these guidelines.

- Images of session speakers/presenters and quotes from their remarks may be liveblogged or tweeted, unless the speaker requests otherwise.
- Sessions labelled “Open only to currently serving presidents” are assumed to be confidential; images and quotes from these sessions should not be posted on social media.
- Do obtain explicit permission to identify a fellow participant by name in an image or quote posted online.
- Do not take or post recordings, either video or audio.
- Camera flashes can present health challenges for some people; please do not use flashes when taking selfies or images of others.
- When in doubt about the appropriateness of posting an image or quote, please ask.
- Please comply with any request from a fellow participant or CIC staff member to remove or edit a particular post or tweet.
