Network for Vocation in Undergraduate Education

Deepening the Theological Exploration of Vocation

Indianapolis, Indiana
March 10–12, 2011
The Council of Independent Colleges gratefully acknowledges the generous support of this program by Lilly Endowment Inc.
Welcome to the first biennial national conference of the Network for Vocation in Undergraduate Education (NetVUE)! This initiative, which is being administered by the Council of Independent Colleges (CIC) with generous support from Lilly Endowment Inc., was launched at the March 2009 conference on Vocation in Undergraduate Education. The goal of NetVUE is to provide a nationwide, campus-supported network that expands and extends conversations about vocational exploration among college and university undergraduates.

The purposes of NetVUE are to:

- Deepen the understanding of the intellectual and theological substance of vocational exploration;
- Examine the role of theological reflection and vocational exploration in a variety of institutional contexts;
- Share knowledge, best practices, and reflection on experiences across participating campuses;
- Facilitate the incorporation of additional colleges and universities into this enterprise; and
- Develop a network for sustaining an extended program in the theological exploration of vocation.

Since CIC’s launch of NetVUE in the fall of 2009, more than 150 colleges and universities have joined. While one-third of these institutions participated over the past decade in the Lilly Endowment-supported Programs for the Theological Exploration of Vocation (PTEV), many others have developed similar initiatives and share similar values.
NetVUE campuses span a diverse spectrum, but they are united by a desire to address deliberately the theological implications of vocation in the classroom, in student life, and in community service. NetVUE seeks to deepen campus capacities to educate future leaders who are theologically literate, whose attitudes and behaviors are shaped by their values and commitments, and who are eager to sustain a life of service guided by a sense of calling.

We welcome your participation in the inaugural NetVUE national conference. Our long-range goal, over the course of several years, is that NetVUE will become well established and that member institutions will assume a gradually larger share of the program leadership and NetVUE expenses, eventually committing themselves to sustainable levels of support for this ongoing network. As we learn from one another in these next few days, sharing rich programs and ideas for strengthening the exploration of vocation on our campuses, we hope you also will commit to meaningful network development for years to come.

OPENING PLENARY SESSION
Souls in Transition: The Quest for Faith and a Future among Emerging Adults

Understanding the dynamics of religious faith among young adults on NetVUE campuses is essential to effective teaching and learning. How are the beliefs and values of students affected by the transition from the support and influence of families and communities of origin to campus communities? On what core topics and practices should campus leaders focus as they explore vocation during students’ undergraduate years, given varied expressions of faith among students? What types of undergraduate learning might inspire, after graduation, the continued engagement of faith-related sources of meaning and service? Christian Smith, author of Souls in Transition: The Religious and Spiritual Lives of Emerging Adults, will consider these and other questions based on the findings of his research on contemporary emerging adults.

Christian Smith, William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of Sociology and Director, Center for the Study of Religion and Society, University of Notre Dame (IN)

Chair: Leanne Neilson, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, California Lutheran University
4:30–5:30 p.m. SMALL GROUP DISCUSSIONS

Please note: Conference participants are assigned to specific groups and meeting locations. Please consult your conference materials for details.

How is the intellectual and theological substance of vocational exploration understood and sustained on NetVUE campuses? In these small group discussions, conference participants will compare and contrast various institutional definitions of an intellectual and theological understanding of vocation and calling, as well as consider how these descriptions affect campus initiatives. Participants will also discuss strategies to sustain vocational exploration on campus over time. Each small group will be provided with a brief written commentary about the nature of vocation on which to base its discussion.

What is the relationship between institutional mission and “high impact” vocational programming? Three college presidents will address their institutions’ understanding of the intellectual and theological substance of vocation in relation to campus mission, culture, structures, and incentives for professional development. Each will describe approaches that integrate support for such efforts into strategic planning, fundraising, and communication with core institutional stakeholders to create sustainability.

DEEPENING THE EFFECTS OF OUR PROGRAMS: INTEGRATING THE NOTION OF VOCATION INTO A FIRST-YEAR EXPERIENCE COURSE
Concordia University (WI)

First-year experience (FYE) courses play an important role in retention and student success in higher education. Today, most colleges and universities offer some kind of FYE course to incoming students. This interactive session will feature strategies on how to integrate the notion of vocation into an FYE course.

HOSPITALITY IS NOT ENOUGH: A CALL FOR RENEWAL IN CAMPUS MINISTRY

Butler University (IN) and University of Indianapolis (IN)

Hospitality is a foundational practice in vocational discernment on both campuses. Conversations with students are informed by theologies of grace and reconciliation, but without partners in campus ministry and interfaith work the results are often limited. Three practitioners working with church-affiliated and secular campuses across Indiana will speak about the need for more partners in the ministries of hospitality, spiritual formation, service, and leadership development.

LEADERSHIP AS VOCATION: ASSESSING INTEGRATIVE LEARNING IN A CO-CURRICULAR PROGRAM

Elizabethtown College (PA)

The “Called to Lead” program enriches students’ curricular and extracurricular experiences with vocational reflection and leadership theory. Presenters will highlight outcomes assessment techniques and relevant indicators related to leadership development, spiritual awareness, and clarified values from reflection papers on both student club leadership and community service, as well as from senior mini-portfolios. An assessment bibliography will be provided for participants.

Michele Lee Kozimor-King, Associate Professor of Sociology

Tracy Wenger Sadd, Chaplain and Lecturer in Religious Studies
MENTORING SOPHOMORE STUDENTS IN VOCATIONAL DISCERNMENT: THE ROLE OF FACULTY MEMBERS

Pepperdine University (CA)

Students experience significant changes in their perception of calling during their sophomore year, when they frequently go through identity crises with their faith and sense of vocational calling. Presenters will discuss research findings from an eight-year study and describe ways that faculty members can provide students with spiritual mentoring during the pivotal sophomore year.

Don Thompson, Professor of Great Books and Mathematics
Darryl Tippens, Provost

NURTURING LEADERSHIP BY AFFIRMING VOCATIONAL GIFTS

Transylvania University (KY)

This presentation will share insights gained from giving students leadership responsibilities in vocational programming. Presenters will share their observations of students’ participation in leadership development programs while in high school, their leadership roles across the undergraduate campus, and their progression into graduate school. The program seeks to nurture the next generation of leaders for church and society.

A SUMMER OF INQUIRY: FROM SEED TO TREE

Goshen College (IN) and Sewanee: The University of the South (TN)

This presentation will showcase two different summer vocational discernment programs for college students: Goshen College’s Inquiry Programs and Sewanee: The University of the South’s Summer Discernment Institute. Though each program is distinct, students in both programs explore the intersection of faith and vocation in full-time summer supervised ministry of service settings, and receive scholarships or stipends.

CURRICULAR STRATEGIES THAT DEEPEN THE INTELLECTUAL AND THEOLOGICAL EXPLORATION OF VOCATION

Hastings College (NE)

Finding effective curricular strategies that harmonize with the character and mission of institutions can deepen the intellectual and theological exploration of vocation among students. This session will offer an adaptable picture of the use of such strategies as faith, ethics, and vocation-related minors, a peace and social change major, and a campus-wide service-learning program.
DEVELOPING A “WELL-EDUCATED SOLIDARITY” FOR A LIFE OF SERVICE

John Carroll University (OH)

The Arrupe Scholars Program is an integrated learning experience that gives undergraduates structured opportunities to examine, reflect, and discuss questions of faith and vocation. Students extend their academic experience to create a more just and humane world, what some call a “well-educated solidarity.” Linking service, faith, and justice with a commitment to academic excellence are the core values of this mission-based program.

Margaret O. Finucane, Director, Center for Service and Social Action

Nicholas R. Santilli, Associate Academic Vice President for Planning, Assessment, and Institutional Effectiveness

FROM VOCATIONAL REFLECTION TO COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

Augustana College (IL)

The newly formed Community Engagement Center (CEC) grows from Augustana’s experience with the Center for Vocational Reflection. The CEC offers new curricular programs and high-impact learning experiences that connect reflective students with the community. The goal is to embody the integration of learning and practical experience that vocational reflection has long championed. The CEC and how it came into being will be described.

MODELS OF EXCELLENCE IN VOCATIONAL MENTORING: LESSONS FROM A NETVUE REGIONAL GATHERING

Gustavus Adolphus College (MN) and St. Norbert College (WI)

This interactive session explores key lessons from a NetVUE gathering on vocational mentoring. Participants will engage such conference themes as best practices of vocation-oriented “mentoring communities,” the ethics of vocational mentoring, whether mentoring can be taught, and how contemplation and attentiveness can be brought to hectic campuses. Presenters will also share insights on planning and executing a regional gathering.

Christopher Johnson, Associate Director, Center for Servant-Leadership and Director for Vocation and Integrative Learning, Gustavus Adolphus College

Julie D. Massey, Director, Program of Faith, Learning, and Vocation and Director of Campus Ministry, St. Norbert College

PLENARY SESSION
Shaping the Life that Matters
A liberal arts educational experience is vital to shaping the whole human being. Each person’s vocational journey is woven with varied educational, social, and spiritual experiences. Knowing and articulating one’s own story is essential to healthy vocational choice. How can a liberal arts education support a deeper theological exploration of personal vocation by influencing the personal narrative one shapes and tells? What types of learning and relationship stories during the undergraduate years might inspire continued reflection after graduation on faith-related sources of meaning and service? In ways that are attentive to rich, deep, but varied religious practices and contexts, how might students be taught about discovering sacred meaning and daily discernment in a world of unexpected crosscurrents?

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT AND VOCATIONAL REFLECTION

Service-learning programs have greatly expanded on campuses in recent years, engaging students in civic action but not always in substantive reflection. The Project on Civic Reflection has developed a method of reflection anchored in discussion of humanities texts that engages students in the complexity of their civic experiences, fostering greater clarity of purpose, understanding of community, and commitment to vocation. Based on a reading from The Civically Engaged Reader, this session will demonstrate a model of civic reflection that provides an effective framework for student engagement and vocation-based service.

INTERFAITH COOPERATION ON CAMPUS: STRATEGIES AND PRACTICES

Eboo Patel’s closing plenary address will outline the importance and urgency of building interfaith cooperation on campus. His organization, Interfaith Youth Core (IFYC), ties campus mission to student leadership development, community service learning, and curricular planning as primary ways to deepen understandings of religious pluralism. Staff members from IFYC will present the hallmarks of a model interfaith campus environment and engage NetVUE leaders in identifying campus strengths and challenges. The session will describe action steps that faculty and staff members can take to implement best practices for interfaith engagement and cooperation.

Mary Ellen Giess, Outreach Manager, Campus Partnerships, Interfaith Youth Core

Chair: Amy Zalk Larson, Campus Pastor, Luther College (IA)

PRACTICING A WAY OF LIFE IN AND FOR THE WORLD

Vocational discernment evokes a wide range of questions about how to live one’s life. This session describes an approach that encourages emerging adults to reflect on a set of practices that gives substance and shape to a way of life as a whole—including community, care for creation, peacemaking, and prayer. The co-editors of On Our Way: Christian Practices for Living a Whole Life, written in collaboration with students, faculty members, and staff from several PTEV institutions, will introduce a Christian theological understanding of life-shaping and life-giving patterns of shared life.

STUDENT OUTCOMES AND BEST PRACTICES OF VOCATIONAL INITIATIVES

Tim Clydesdale, evaluator of Lilly Endowment’s Programs for the Theological Exploration of Vocation, will highlight findings of his study of the 88 institutions in the program. Students who were engaged in this program developed maturity, resilience, and intentionality. These qualities made a profound difference in how they navigated the first year after college. Clydesdale will describe best practices for short- and long-term student outcomes. He is author of The First Year Out: Understanding American Teens after High School (University of Chicago Press, 2007) and the forthcoming Changing on Purpose: When Students and Professors Find Their Callings.

STUDENT SOULS IN TRANSITION

A significant proportion of emerging adults in religious transition are students on NetVUE campuses. In this session Christian Smith will lead a conversation in which participants can learn more about the religious and spiritual lives of emerging adults who inhabit NetVUE colleges and universities. In question and answer format, this session will focus on understanding six major religious types of emerging adults using NetVUE campus case examples for illustration.

DISCERNING VOCATION IN LUTHER COLLEGE’S JANUARY TERM

Luther College (IL)

“Vocation, Self, and Service” is a course that combines reflection on students’ strengths with service, readings, and discussion to empower students in the discernment of their vocations. The session will begin with a description of the course and reflections on teaching it. This will be followed by a video produced by students and a time for questions and answers.

SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT AND CONSCIENCE FORMATION IN EMERGING ADULTS: ENCOURAGING DIALOGUES AND ASSESSING GROWTH

Assumption College (MA) and University of Indianapolis (IN)

Presenters from two institutions will discuss how to encourage emerging adults’ religious and moral formation. This session will describe what one institution is doing to develop new opportunities or refinements of current co-curricular programs to better integrate conscience formation and how another institution is developing an assessment tool to measure spiritual growth and formation framed by character, action, and belief.

STRATEGIES TO PROMOTE THE SEARCH FOR MEANING AND VOCATION IN UNDERGRADUATES: NON-TRADITIONAL AND TRADITIONAL STUDENTS

Fontbonne University (MO) and Houghton College (NY)

Presenters will describe the Dedicated Semester at Fontbonne University and other ways that non-traditional and traditional students are invited to consider the mission and the meaning of their academic work. Presenters also will discuss the contrasts between the ways that traditional and non-traditional students at Houghton College interpret and engage the notion of vocation (i.e., work as “calling”).

SUSTAINING VOCATIONAL COMMITMENTS: MOVING FROM GRANT INITIATIVES TO A NEW DEPARTMENT

Calvin College (MI)

In an effort to sustain Lilly-funded initiatives on vocation, the Congregational and Ministries Studies Department was formed. This department provides opportunities for student learning, apprenticeships, and faculty development and scholarship. Presenters will discuss the processes through which this department came into being, challenges faced, and current curricular and scholarly initiatives.

DISCOVERING ONE’S OWN NARRATIVE

Cardinal Stritch University (WI)

This course challenges students to probe the flow of their lives to establish a coherent narrative that moves them toward an awareness of vocation. Students are asked to examine the lives of three people—Francis of Assisi, Dorothy Day, and Martin Luther King, Jr.—to discover how these narratives might intersect with and enrich the movement of the students’ own lives.

ENGAGING STUDENTS OF MULTIPLE RELIGIOUS BACKGROUNDs IN VOCATIONAL DISCERNMENT

Wake Forest University (NC)

For liberal arts institutions that strive to be inclusive to students of all faith traditions, the terms “vocation” and “calling” can create unintended barriers to engagement. To engage students in this crucial process, Wake Forest University has created an Office for Personal and Career Development to develop new curricular and co-curricular experiences and partnerships. The presenters welcome feedback, perspectives, and experiences.

LOCATION, LOCATION, VOCATION:
THE TENSION BETWEEN CALL AND CONTEXT

Augsburg College (MN)

Vocation balances calling and context. Three contexts inform the conversation about vocation at Augsburg College: the surrounding neighborhoods, the founding tradition of the college, and the institutional location of the conversation. This presentation will examine how these three tensive elements surfaced and came together in the required introductory course, “Christian Vocation and the Search for Meaning.”

NEW WAYS TO SERVE A CHANGING CHURCH
Hope College (MI)
Although churches sometimes hire recent college graduates to staff certain lay ministry positions, these young people are not always adequately prepared to wrestle with the theological complexities of the churches they serve and the culture at large. Hope College’s Studies in Ministry minor offers rigorous coursework, mentoring relationships, and year-long internships in order to help graduates face the challenges of a changing church.

THE ROLE OF LOCAL AND GLOBAL SERVICE IN THE DISCERNMENT OF VOCATION
Point Loma Nazarene University (CA)
This presentation will discuss the university’s experience with local and global service in both the academic and structured ministry settings. Presenters will provide a variety of examples of service projects, discuss the ways in which they prepare and support students, and consider what they are learning about how to help students make connections between service experiences and their own sense of call.

VITALITY AND INNOVATION: “BEST PROCESSES” FOR KEEPING VOCATIONAL DISCERNMENT PROGRAMMING CREATIVE AND RESPONSIVE

Santa Clara University (CA)

Learn how Santa Clara University practices “best processes” to develop vocational discernment programs that adapt to emerging needs while responding to the callings of the staff and faculty. Presenters will describe Santa Clara’s discernment programs, including partnerships with learning communities and core curriculum requirements. They will discuss fresh ways to bring vocational discernment to campus and tap into the creativity and inspiration of campus leaders.

Acts of Faith: Exploring Vocation through Interfaith Cooperation

College and university graduates join a pluralistic global society in which religion has often been a cause for division rather than a resource for civic unity. In addition, many NetVUE campuses are experiencing increased religious diversity among their students. How is an understanding of religious diversity related to the intellectual and theological exploration of vocation? How can NetVUE campus leaders best educate students about the role of interfaith cooperation in a pluralistic society?
